Village-to-Village Expedition

Senahú Region · Alta Verapaz, Guatemala

The Work You Will Do

GARDEN TOWERS FOR MALNOURISHED FAMILIES

Thanks to the USANA Foundation, we build garden towers with Narú families, providing an economical way for them to grow fresh food in limited space at home. After being trained in Senahú, each small group works with two families to complete their garden towers.

HOME VISITS & FOOD DELIVERIES

Your trip fees help purchase food for Narú families, then we divide into small groups to deliver it from home to home. Every visit includes daily-life conversation and a "tell me your story" discussion, where relationships replace transactions.

WHO COMES ON THE EXPEDITION?

Medical professionals and Spanish speakers can put their skills to meaningful use alongside the Narú team, but no specific background is required. An open heart and willingness to serve are enough.

FAMILIES ARE WELCOME

Families with children ages 10 and older are welcome. Older children participate meaningfully in the work and bring a natural warmth and approachability that make the group experience even richer.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

A current passport valid for at least six months after the expedition is required. No visa is required for stays under 90 days. Many roads in the Polochic region are unpaved, and plans can change. Flexibility will make your experience more enjoyable. We hold a no-gifting policy so relationships, not handouts, define our presence.

"These expeditions are a two-gift exchange. We bring supplies; in return, local families offer grace, gratitude, and transformative lessons found only in their unique culture."
